

SmartStream Brings in Richard Bowler as its Chief Financial Officer

Bowler joins SmartStream's London office to lead its finance team as its CFO.

 Jeff Patterson | Executive Moves (Executives) | Tuesday, 21/03/2017|12:19 GMT

Photo: Bloomberg

SmartStream, a financial Transaction Lifecycle Management (TLM) specialist and provider, has secured the services of Richard Bowler as its newest Chief Financial Officer (CFO), part of its latest addition to its senior management team.

Mr. Bowler joins SmartStream with immediate effect – as its CFO, his mandate will be to oversee all aspects of the group's finances, including treasury, administration and financial strategy. In this capacity, he will be managing the group's finance team, based out of London, where he will be reporting to SmartStream's CEO, Haytham Kaddoura.

He joins SmartStream with over two decades of experience in the financial services industry, including several senior appointments. His most recent role was as the CFO of Asset Control, with additional stops at the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), Technologies Division, as well as BT Global Services, BT Radianz, and Reuters.

According to Haytham Kaddoura, in a statement on the appointment: "I'm pleased to welcome Richard to the executive management team. His many years of experience in the financial services sector adds great depth to our team.

Richard Bowler

At SmartStream we are committed to building excellence at all levels of the organisation, including acquiring the right skill set needed to drive our future growth plans. Richard will be an integral part of the management structure."

"This is a great opportunity to work with a dedicated team of people, offering a wide array of best-in-class solutions to a strong client base. This is the optimal formula for success," reiterated Mr. Bowler, in an accompanying statement.